

THE LAST 7 DAYS

Project Pitch Deck & Concept Outline

FORMAT: TV Series / Feature Film

GENRE: Psychological Thriller, Dark Comedy, Crime

THEMES: Revenge, Elaborate Heist/Scam, Divine Justice Illusion

LOGLINE:

After being ruthlessly fired by his arrogant boss upon revealing he has a terminal illness, a brilliant engineer teams up with the boss's wife to orchestrate an ingenious scam: trapping the boss in a simulated intensive care unit and convincing him that he has only seven days left to live.

MAIN CHARACTERS

The Engineer	Brilliant but desperate. Suffering from a terminal illness and in dire need of an organ transplant, he has absolutely nothing left to lose. He serves as the criminal mastermind behind this flawless, high-stakes psychological operation.
The Boss	Arrogant, ruthless, and deeply selfish. He firmly believes that money can solve any problem and casually abuses his power to crush his employees. His narcissism makes him highly vulnerable to a tailored psychological trap.
The Boss's Wife	Completely fed up with her husband's cruelty and greed. She serves as the perfect inside informant and key collaborator, leveraging her access to facilitate the engineer's master plan.
"The Grim Reaper"	An incredibly skilled actor and the core piece of the scam crew. Dressed in a sharp suit, he is sharp-witted, highly persuasive, and delivers dry, sarcastic humor. He plays the manifestation of death to break the boss's psyche.

STORY OUTLINE (SYNOPSIS)

ACT I: DESPERATION & DESIGN

The Engineer is trapped in the clutches of a fatal disease; his only hope for survival is an immediate organ transplant. When he desperately approaches his wealthy Boss to beg for support, the cold-hearted mogul ruthlessly fires him on the spot instead. Realizing that pleading is futile, the Engineer channelizes his technical brilliance into an intricate plot of vengeance and survival. He allies with the Boss's disgruntled Wife. Together, they covertly transform the Engineer's ordinary apartment into a meticulously realistic, high-tech simulation of a hospital intensive care unit (ICU).

ACT II: THE ICU ILLUSION

The Boss is covertly drugged, kidnapped, and transported to the simulated apartment. He awakens entirely bandaged, hooked up to realistic medical machinery in the mock ICU. Beside him, his Wife puts on an Oscar-worthy performance, weeping over his condition, while hired actors disguised as doctors artificially discuss the critical, terminal state of his health just within earshot.

Once the "doctors" leave, the Boss is left entirely alone with a mysterious, sharp-dressed man in a suit. This figure introduces himself as the "Grim Reaper." Because the rest of the medical staff intentionally acts as though the man is invisible, the Boss is fully tricked into believing this is a supernatural phenomenon. The Grim Reaper informs the Boss that God has granted him a final, merciful window: he has exactly 7 days left to live. To atone for a lifetime of malicious sins, he must execute a grand act of pure righteousness. Every single day, the Reaper returns, using sharp, sarcastic wit to systematically dismantle the Boss's remaining psychological defenses.

ACT III: THE SEVENTH DAY & THE SIGNATURE

On the critical seventh day, the Grim Reaper enters the room with a cold finality: "It is over. Your time is up." Terrified and staring into the abyss of death, the panicked Boss begs for a way out. The Reaper gives him a single option: donate his entire net worth to save his soul. He hands the desperate mogul a document—ostensibly a deed transferring his entire wealth to a prominent charitable organization. In reality, the fraudulent contract legally transfers all his assets directly to his Wife and the fired Engineer. The trembling Boss signs the papers immediately. The moment the ink dries, the Reaper blasts a chemical spray into his face, knocking him unconscious once more.

ACT IV: THE BITTER REALITY (THE TWIST)

The Boss finally awakens, but the pristine ICU is gone. He is lying on the floor of a stripped, bare, derelict room. He feels an acute, burning pain in his torso; touching his side, he discovers a fresh surgical dressing exactly where his kidney used to be—the Engineer has successfully harvested the organ he needed to survive.

The walls of the room are spray-painted with ominous, chilling religious texts: "Every soul shall taste death," and "You shall pay the price for your sins." Distraught and confused, the Boss stumbles through the empty house. Scattered across the floor, he finds legitimate legal notices. He no longer owns his company, his estate, or a single cent of his fortune—and he is missing a kidney. The scene cuts to black as his agonizing, desperate screams echo through the empty house.

In the final shot, a sleek, luxury sports car speeds down an open highway. Inside, the healthy, recovered Engineer and the Boss's ex-wife share a triumphant smile as they drive away into a new life. Final Fade Out.

Open Source Concept Declaration: This document serves as a foundational conceptual framework for a TV series or feature film. Character sheets, setting adjustments, and full scriptwriting processes are completely open for creative development. The author grants full freedom to adapt, pitch, and sell this project to digital streaming platforms and production networks. Good luck!